About the Endowment:

The Weed Science Society of North Carolina was formed to advance the discipline of Weed Science in North Carolina and improve the well-being of the citizens of the state through a better understanding of weeds and their management. The objectives of The Society are to provide information to the general public within the discipline of weed science to better inform them of benefits of weed science technology and the detrimental effects of weeds on society; to develop among the general public a high level of interest and understanding of problems caused by weeds; to foster and support research, teaching, extension, and problem-solving efforts in weed science activities; and to promote the safe and effective use of herbicides and other weed management technologies in North Carolina.

Members of the Society include leaders in industry and governmental agencies, as well as researchers from the area's educational institutions.

Endowment Ceremony
at NC State, May 2006

In 2006, in order to continue the tradition of serving the citizens of North Carolina, the Society created a permanent, named endowment. The Weed Science Society of North Carolina Endowment provides support for Weed Science student activities in the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences at North Carolina State University and other universities in our state.

Weed Science students, programs and projects are selected through a competitive process. All are chosen by the Society.

Currently we are able to provide one award per year, from the interest on the endowment. Our goal is to make more and larger awards as the endowment grows, but WE NEED YOUR HELP!
